The U.S.A.: Ally Or Sucker?

About this time last year, the army of the if the plan jeent through, French Republic was snnggled complacently in us "impregnable" Maginot Line, eating rich lood, genting the D.1.'s, and complaining genchally of the duliness of presentday warfare.

In England the men who controlled the goveriment were speaking smight of conducting 'business as usual" while their superb navy blackaded Hitler's Germany into submission In the United States people were saving the whole thing was phoney, and were wondering if Summer Welles' junker to Europe might not mean that a peace was about to be negotiated. It was the cra of the "sitzkrieg," the period of alic "bore war.

But it was also, as it later two ned out, the full before the storm.

Now we are at identically the same point we occupied in early March, 1910, and wondering. as we slid then, what is to happen next. The only differences are that France ioday is Nazi rather than French, and the United States is a non-lighting ally of Great Britain tather than an amusid and licekling neutral. And the men who control the government of England are said by aost to law e learned their lesson.

The British Tories have insisted time and again since Steinkjer and Amiens and Dunkirk and Covenus that they now are lighting for democratic ideals rather than war time prolits. In the opportunity to liberate Europe rather than for designs of empire. They are quick to say that they are no longer half-hearted, that they have given up the idea of "business as usual"-honest to goodness they have.

Americans want to believe, and many of its dobelieve, that these things are true. We are now non-helligerents on Britaiti's side, committed to her aid, and determined to see that she does not go down. Besides, we have seen how the common people of Fugland, already taxed hall their wages to support the war and subjected to daily bombings, are holding up and lighting back with a contage that is as heartening as anything history can oller. We want to see the British win: we think the British people deserve it.

But of late some things have been happening that make some of us wonder if the Tories have really assimilated last summer's lesson after all.

Things that remind as somehow of the "phoney war" cra of a year ago, that convince us even more that, next to the Nazis themselves. the Brnish Tories are the most thoroughly despreable breed of men on earth.

La liegin with, in December there were Associated Press reports out of London to the effect that Engish mercantile interests were blocking arrempts by the Admiralty to transfer Britain's engrossed in conducting "business as usual," South American shipping to American vessels ish ships for the North Atlantic romes. The Lordon from admitted the reason for the refusal would were then South American markets away Staffels singing in Berkelev Square.

Soon alter this Buebas Aires' La Prensa, often called "the most objective newspaper in the Western Hemisphere," published the financial statements of several British armamem firms for the year 1940. The account revealed that Armstrong-Vickers and the English aluminum trust both had declared the largest dividends in their history. And in a country which supposedly is lighting for its very existence and which asks 50 per cent of its people's incomes to prosecute

And more recently, according to the strongly pro-British column, The Washington Merry-Go-Round, the colonial officials in the West Indian islands have been driving painfully hard bargains for land which the United States needs for naval bases and air fields-land to which America is rightfully entitled because of the President's destroyer deal last September.
